

The healing power of open land has been demonstrated in a way no one had anticipated.

One silver lining in the unprecedented times we've been living through is that many people have discovered the boost to physical health and emotional balance provided by natural green spaces.

Both Angle Fly Preserve and Rhinoceros Creek Reservation saw a huge jump in visits from individuals and families in 2020-21. Eager to get out of the house, needing a safe place to connect with others, these Somers spaces have offered a safety valve for the stress we are all feeling.

The increased usage, coupled with damaging weather events, provided a great challenge to the small crew at Somers Land Trust who work diligently to keep the trees sawn through and the shrubs trimmed back from the trails.

We anticipate the heavy use will continue as we all struggle to get back to some semblance of normal life while staying safe and healthy. Please consider donating a few hours along with your dollars to help us keep the trails open for all.
